

In An Alternative Universe

330. In an Alternative Universe “having your cake and eating it too” seems a bit too obvious.
331. In an Alternative Universe being “punch drunk” is considered legally as a political condition.
332. In an Alternative Universe “pride goeth before the fall, afterward, it is seldom considered.
333. In an Alternative Universe those who “wear their religion on their sleeve”, seldom carry it in their heart.
334. In an Alternative Universe those who keep “a little black book” often have hearts to match.
335. In an Alternative Universe those who make “Gentlemen’s Agreements”, generally aren’t.
336. In an Alternative Universe one who possesses a “sparkling personality” is considered to have a “full charge”.
337. In an Alternative Universe “a coat of paint hides a multitude of sins” but, not the smell.
338. In an Alternative Universe those with “horse sense” justify the saddles they wear.
339. In an Alternative Universe one who is “all hat and no cowboy” seldom rides in a high wind.
340. In an Alternative Universe “birds of a feather flock together but, generally perch alone.

341. In an Alternative Universe a sound “loud enough to wake the dead” generally “offs” the living.
342. In an Alternative Universe one who “rolls over in his grave” is not generally known to report the event.
343. In an Alternative Universe one who “just glosses it over” seldom prepares first with a primer coat.
344. In an Alternative Universe “a hair of the dog that bit you”, also bites.
345. In an Alternative Universe one who lusts after “a dog’s life” has forgotten the part about the food.
346. In an Alternative Universe no one is “at a loss for words” since there is no shortage of them.
347. In an Alternative Universe no one is “filthy rich” since having money makes staying “clean” easy.
348. In an Alternative Universe being “dirt poor” simply means one is in need of good fertilizer.
349. In an Alternative Universe one who “sings for his supper” is expected to provide his own music.
350. In an Alternative Universe one who “puts all his eggs in one basket” generally has only one chicken.
351. In an Alternative Universe “ignorance gone to seed” generally produces a good crop of fertilizer.
352. In an Alternative Universe “ignorance gone to seed” generally yields a limited harvest.

353. In an Alternative Universe one who must “drop back and punt” occasionally is better at savoring a win.
354. In an Alternative Universe those who are willing to “slaughter someone else’s’ sacred cows” seldom sacrifice much of anything themselves on the alter of “righteousness”.
355. In an Alternative Universe “having one for the road” is generally okay if one is hiking back home on a trail.
356. In an Alternative Universe having “an upside down mortgage” is like having an upside down swimming pool...staying afloat just doesn’t work.
357. In an Alternative Universe “mixed blessings” are about as popular as mixed vegetables.
358. In an Alternative Universe those who engage in “plausible deniability” often face deniability plausibility.
359. In an Alternative Universe one who constantly demands “his piece of the pie” is seldom the baker.
360. In an Alternative Universe those who “give the Devil his due” often find there is “Hell to Pay” later.
361. In an Alternative Universe those who complain that “it’s hot as Hades” understate the obvious.
362. In an Alternative Universe, those who complain that “it’s hot as Hades” must have some hidden frame of reference.
363. In an Alternative Universe, one who is “the picture of health” is considered two-dimensional.

364. In an Alternative Universe, “people who live in glass houses” seldom live next door to anyone.
365. In an Alternative Universe, “people who live in glass houses” always have basements.
366. In an Alternative Universe, “people who live in glass houses” seldom hire paint contractors.
367. In an Alternative Universe, nothing ever has to do with “the price of rice in China”.
368. In an Alternative Universe, “getting the cart before the horse” works very well when backing up.
369. In an Alternative Universe, no one ever “has a cow” as it is entirely too bovine.
370. In an Alternative Universe, those who “take everything with a grain of salt” thirst after certainty.
371. In an Alternative Universe, those who “Stand for what they believe” never sit down when challenged.
372. In an Alternative Universe, those who proclaim “might is right”...might be wrong.
373. In an Alternative Universe, “shooting the bird” at someone is acceptable as the bird is always a canary.
374. In an Alternative Universe, all used cars are referred to as “seasoned”.
375. In an Alternative Universe, “blowing one’s own horn” is preferred to playing one’s own tambourine.

376. In an Alternative Universe, those who have “been up to no good” always develop a nasty guilt rash.
377. In an Alternative Universe, “rubbing someone the wrong way” is considered subjective; thus must be avoided.
378. In an Alternative Universe, no one “takes the good with the bad” unless when considering the results of a Congressional election.
379. In an Alternative Universe, one who “kicks the bucket” is expected to return and fit it.
380. In an Alternative Universe, no one laughs at “practical jokes” since they are so...practical.
381. In an Alternative Universe, smoke detectors are only used in “No Smoking” areas.
382. In an Alternative Universe, pride goeth before all seasons, not just the Fall.
383. In an Alternative Universe, one who “begs to differ” with someone needs assertiveness training.
384. In an Alternative Universe, those who “pick up the pieces and go on” are always in charge of puzzles.
385. In an Alternative Universe, those who “burn with desire” also tend to smolder with passion.
386. In an Alternative Universe, polygamy is discouraged as more than one of anything is considered redundant.

387. In an Alternative Universe, one who is given “the green light to go ahead” with a project is expected to always stop on red.
388. In an Alternative Universe, those who “age well” are referred to as having Gouda.
389. In an Alternative Universe, ‘patience is a virtue’ except when stalled on a railroad track.
390. In an Alternative Universe, “burning a candle at both ends” requires special gravity.
391. In an Alternative Universe, “dotting your i’s and crossing your t’s” means you operate in a ‘lower case’ world.
392. In an Alternative Universe, all snowflakes are alike.
393. In an Alternative Universe, time always flows slower on Fridays.
394. In an Alternative Universe, when “levels the playing field” all up hill games require a handicap.
395. In an Alternative Universe, ghosts do not believe in people.
396. In an Alternative Universe, products that are “on sale” sometimes fall off.
397. In an Alternative Universe, “getting a degree” means you most likely have a temperature.

398. In an Alternative Universe, no one tries to “Get Ahead” since they already have one.
399. In an Alternative Universe, clocks only chime when someone is listening.
400. In an Alternative Universe, the refrigerator light is still a mystery.
401. In an Alternative Universe, being “in charge” means you have “potential”.
402. In an Alternative Universe, there is never a “light at the end of the tunnel” at night.
403. In an Alternative Universe, one who “throws a little light on the subject” probably needs a brighter bulb.
404. In an Alternative Universe, “food for thought” generally must be seasoned to taste.
405. In an Alternative Universe, “food for thought” is seldom served as aside dish.
406. In an Alternative Universe, “food for thought” is seldom served by the cook.
407. In an Alternative Universe, “the cat never drags anything in”.
408. In an Alternative Universe, it never rains “cat and dogs” on the same day.
409. In an Alternative Universe, people who live in glass houses always have bathrooms in the basement.

410. In an Alternative Universe, those who believe “the Devil is in the details” often say: “That’s a Hell of a Job!”
411. In an Alternative Universe, one who has a “potty mouth” is expected to floss and to flush regularly.
412. In an Alternative Universe, one who is regarded as “the cat’s meow” is generally purr-fect.
413. In an Alternative Universe, the “squeaky wheel gets the grease”, then tends to loose traction.
414. In an Alternative Universe, no one is actually proud of war ser v ice.
415. In an Alternative Universe, no one cares about celebrity photos.
416. In an Alternative Universe, one’s vehicle miles-per-gallon is used to set the price for gasoline at the pump.
417. In an Alternative Universe, the Greek gods simply took early retirement.
418. In an Alternative Universe, grades never matter, only ability and performance.
419. In an Alternative Universe, obesity is considered a form of ignorance.
420. In an Alternative Universe, the “tie that binds” is reserved for corrupt politicians.
421. In an Alternative Universe, “getting your ducks in a row” is referred to as a “straight waddle”.

422. In an Alternative Universe, everything is “taken with a grain of salt”, thus boosting beer sales.
423. In an Alternative Universe, “name dropping” is considered as linguistic fumbling.
424. In an Alternative Universe, “passing the buck” means you can out run a deer.
425. In an Alternative Universe, “passing the buck” means you are a poor hunter.
426. In an Alternative Universe, no one “passes the time”; keeping up with it...but never passing it.
427. In an Alternative Universe, everyone knows “killing time” would take way too long.
428. In an Alternative Universe, everyone knows “killing time” means nothing would ever get done after that...no time.
429. In an Alternative Universe, “history is never written by the victor”...just a guy named Arnold.
430. In an Alternative Universe, “passing the buck” means it never stops anywhere near you.
431. In an Alternative Universe, silly people still are....
432. In an Alternative Universe, amusement parks are never more than amusing.
433. In an Alternative Universe, “gaming officials” are only in charge of deer hunting.

434. In an Alternative Universe, one who is “drunk as a skunk” also smells bad.
435. In an Alternative Universe, hand puppets are often used in the President’s State of the Union speech.
436. In an Alternative Universe, titles are for books only...never for people.
437. In an Alternative Universe, being “politically correct” is akin to insanity.
438. In an Alternative Universe, a “slam dunk” is reserved for really large cookies and one quart “cups” of coffee.
439. In an Alternative Universe, “hanging ten” is preferred to the guillotine.
440. In an Alternative Universe, Congress only votes on what laws not to pass.
441. In an Alternative Universe, “if no one sees a tree fall in the forest”, the sound is delayed until someone can hear it later.
442. In an Alternative Universe, there is never just a “thirst for knowledge”, but also a “hunger to learn”.
443. In an Alternative Universe, only the student who does not raise a hand gets called upon by the teacher.
444. In an Alternative Universe, cats can speak...but choose not to.

445. In an Alternative Universe, no one counts up how old they are, just how much time they have left.
446. In an Alternative Universe, “Talk Radio” has been replaced by “Humming Radio”.
447. In an Alternative Universe, only those who cast no shadow are allowed to worship the sun.
448. In an Alternative Universe, those who are “pillars of society” have often been sculpted for the position.
449. In an Alternative Universe, “push comes to shove” only when shove is tired.
450. In an Alternative Universe, a “country club” is only composed of farmers.
451. In an Alternative Universe, everyone votes but no one counts them.
452. In an Alternative Universe, god makes sinners sit in a “time out” for a really, really long time.
453. In an Alternative Universe, hockey is known as the sport of gentlemen.
454. In an Alternative Universe, Elmer Fudd speaks with a perfect Boston accent.
455. In an Alternative Universe, money smell really bad so being rich means you stink.

456. In an Alternative Universe, all birds know how to curse so they are never put in cages.
457. In an Alternative Universe, preachers have to pay to preach so there are not a lot of them.
458. In an Alternative Universe, people with “a pure heart” also tend to have low cholesterol.
459. In an Alternative Universe, no one can “buy their way into Heaven” but many churches can set you up with a celestial installment plan.
460. In an Alternative Universe, classes in “silent swearing” are only taught in monasteries.
461. In an Alternative Universe, only the Pope believes he is infallible.
462. In an Alternative Universe, the “the Middle Ages” were followed by the Old Ages.
463. In an Alternative Universe, a “big boned person” actually has a fat skeleton.
464. In an Alternative Universe, there are no “good old Joes” since they are always named Harry.
465. In an Alternative Universe, no one ever admits to having been in a war.
466. In an Alternative Universe, polished shoes and a freshly washed car make people think you are up to something.

467. In an Alternative Universe, the “Old West” is now even older.
468. In an Alternative Universe, if you are living “high on the hog” you must be some form of parasite.
469. In an Alternative Universe, anyone who is “completely thoughtless” is most likely dead.
470. In an Alternative Universe, “a rose by any other name” could be Betty or Janet.
471. In an Alternative Universe, opera is popular and people pretend to know what it’s all about.
472. In an Alternative Universe, no one “runs for office” but, they often from it.
473. In an Alternative Universe, remarrying a person whom one has previously divorced is considered a form of insanity.